Arabo-Sasanidische Drachmen

(in German language with English translation of important parts)

Bremer Beiträge zur Münz- und Geldgeschichte, Band 8

Bremer Numismatische Gesellschaft

This book describes the collection of the author which contains beside a number of rare and very rare coins also 20 unicates. These Arab-Sassanian dirhams are the first Islamic silver coins from the time of the first and second century of the Hijra, which have been minted after the Arab conquest of the Persian territories of the last pre-islamic dynasty of the Sassanians according to the pattern of the Persian drachms. They differ from them only – apart from a few exceptions – by Arabic inscriptions in the margin.

In an introductory part - before the catalogue proper - abbreviations, the transliteration, frequently occurring religious formulae, the coin pattern and the system of describing the coins are explained and a map of the mint places is shown.

In the following catalogue part, which is arranged in chronological order of rulers resp. governors with their mints in alphabetical order, all coins are shown with obverse and reverse and described in detail. No evaluation is made.

The supplement contains an index of countermarks on the coins and a summary of the coins of the collection with a transcription of the Pahlavi years', mints' and names' graphs.

The introduction and the text describing the most extraordinary coin of this catalogue and its historic background have been translated into English to enable non-German readers to draw profit from this book.
